by the Egyptians in 2100 B.C. Historians speculate drugs may date to 3500 B.C., but there is no documentation to support their hypothesis, he added.

But in numerous ways the practice of medicine and its drugs have changed drastically since the Idaho doctor used his cache of botanical remedies 67 years ago.

The 96-item collection — which Dr. Petersen labeled "one of the finest I've seen" — is a good selection of the 200 to 300 drugs available in 1910, the pharmacist said.

2,000 Different Drugs

Today, for example, the LDS Hospital Pharmacy stocks more than 2,000 different drugs.

Dr. Petersen said the 1910 botanical drugs have been largely abandoned. A few are still used such, as foxglove, the source for the powerful heart stimulant digitalis, and opium, the source for the pain killers morphine and codeine.

The 1977 patient takes his prescription into the corner drug store and the pharmacist shifts pills from one bottle to another.

"Pharmacy was an art of mixing, an art of compounding," Dr. Petersen said of the 1910 era. "Nearly every drug had to be compounded."

The 1910 patient was also involved in his drug's preparation. Many boxes carry instructions.

The recipient of Black Haw was told to combine one ounce of the alterative. Used internally in chronic diarrhea, dysentery, palpitation of the heart, etc. It is also said to have a tonic effect on the uterus, and to an almost positive remedy in preventing abortions."

Grandpa's Painkiller claimed to cure any ailment of man or beast, while poison oak taken internally was said to help paralysis in addition to being a diuretic, laxative and diaphoretic (substance causing perspiration).

Dr. Petersen said he doubts the therapeutic value of these and other 1910 drugs.

"Most of them probably did some good psychologically, but in terms of physiological good, they might have helped to a small degree but they wouldn't have cured," he commented.

The 1910 drugs came at the start of government regulation of drugs. The first food and drug law passed in 1906.

Statute Ineffective

"Prior to that time you could buy opium at the corner grocery store,"

Dr. Petersen said.

He said although the 1906 statute aimed at controlling drug purity and labeling at the federal level, it was fairly ineffective. The 1938 Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, broadened to include cosmetics and medical devices, tightened control, the pharmacy professor said.

Like today, endorsements — an art as old as mankind — were abundant. The 1977 television viewer is familiar with John Wayne in Monument Valley hawking headache remedies.

New low-tar with that Tareyton plus: Flavor improved by charcoal.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reports that charcoal is the best available method for filtering water. It's also used to mellow the taste of the finest bourbons. Plain white filters remove taste. Tareyton's charcoal filter actually improves flavor. That's why Tareyton goes low-tar one better.
